$0 bill in the fall

No fees for Madison school system students

By TALI HUNT

Families of students at Madison Consolidated Schools will not have to pay any textbook rental or technology fees for the 2019-2020 school year.

MCS Superintendent Jeff Studebaker announced that the costs normally paid by parents when they are registering their parents for school in the fall will be covered by donations.

"It's been incredible," said MCS Communications Coordinator Ashley Schutte. "People are very appreciative…it seems almost like people are asking 'Is this real?'"

It is very real.

Next year will be the pilot year for the initiative. MCS personnel said their conservative estimate for the cost is $300,000.

The donor: SuperATV, a family-owned and -operated business on Madison's hilltop.

"The response has been unreal," said Harold Hunt, owner and president of SuperATV. "We are proud to be part of such a great city and community and schools are a core component of those. It's enabled us to attract the best employees to help make all of this happen."

SuperATV makes quarterly donations to MCS as part of a partnership agreement. Last year, MCS received $375,000 through SuperATV's regular donations, according to MCS.

"It was exciting and a great opportunity to be able to help the community," said Lindsay Hunt, vice president of sales and administration at SuperATV. "Dr. Studebaker brought the idea to us, then we started brainstorming. And, it didn't take too many meetings before we had things ironed out."

Class video controversy

MCHS principal talks to students and parents

By TALI HUNT

Classes were addressed in person Wednesday and letters were sent home Thursday from Madison Consolidated High School Principal Michael Gasaway as school officials worked to respond to parent and student concerns and clarify facts surrounding videos about abortion that were shown in biology classes Friday, May 3.

"I apologize for this, and at the end of the day, it is my responsibility to make sure this school is being conducted in the right manner. For that I take full responsibilitty," Gasaway said in the letter from him that went to parents.

Gasaway said Thursday that he had gone to all six class periods that had viewed two videos to ensure the students knew they had doors open to them to share concerns about the videos' content.

Gasaway said the video had not been approved by administrators and that school personnel would be working together to ensure lesson plans are well thought through and presented without bias.

Biology teacher Chris Barlow showed the two videos. One was produced by Planned Parenthood and was reported to be about two minutes. The other lasted about 30 minutes and showed the abortion procedure through an ultrasound.

Parents said their children told them Barlow said he was showing the videos to enable a class discussion on the abortion topic as it relates to the Roe v. Wade decision at the Supreme Court, which was detailed in their textbooks.

One parent who talked with the Courier said the discussion was to take place the next class period. The discussion never took place because

Residents take Victoria Inn woes to council

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to The Courier

Years of fear, disgust, anger and frustration spilled out as people affected by Victoria Inn told their stories of finding drug syringes on their doorsteps and on their lawns, squatters sleeping in their yards and garages, death threats, and the last straw when an inn resident was severely stabbed in his room May 3.

The people laid it all out Wednesday evening to the City Council, whose members appeared to be unaware that the large group that had sat through the council meeting was there to support the handful who told their horror stories during the public comments portion of the meeting at the end of the agenda. The room was hushed as the speakers recounted how their lives had become unbearable and, as one put it, to beg the city to do something about the inn at 801 East Main St.

When the inn's neighbors had worried, frightened, that the stabber was loose near their homes, Tiffany Bauer was holding the bleeding man until the ambulance arrived. It was her first day as the new manager of Victoria Inn.

She said Thursday that she would have been at the City Council meeting, except she didn't know the upset group was going to be there. She wanted to tell them and the city officials and everyone else that she intends to restore the Victoria Inn's reputation and appearance. The police have been sent to the inn 600 times since 2016, said Gary Duckworth, who lives on East Third Street. At this year's current pace, there will be more than that this year alone, he said.

Bauer said it won't happen on her watch. She said she posted new rules, including that there can be no liquor or drugs on the property. People who live there must be employed, she said, and homeless people cannot spend the night in the lobby. A night watchman has been hired and there is a maintenance crew, she said. Bauer said she does a daily room check. Most of the younger tenants have been kicked out, so most now are in their 40s to 60s, she said.

Bauer, 38, said she will be at the next council meeting. Managing apartments is new to her, she said, but she has experience in quality control. She grew up in Hanover and now considers herself a Madisonian. She said that although she used to use alcohol and drugs, she has been clean for three years and has turned into an avid jogger.

City attorney Joe Jenner said he is looking into what the city can do, and Mayor Damon Welch said he has several attorneys looking into all aspects of ordinances to learn what can be done.

"We all take some of the blame for this," Welch said. "We are going to do our best to act on it. …We have to do it within the law."

The city residents who spoke at the council meeting were specific in their narratives.

Debra Squires has lived about two blocks west of Victoria Inn for less than a year. She said the alley next

Fort Wayne, Evansville airports win grants for projects

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — The main airports in Fort Wayne and Evansville are receiving $18 million in federal grants toward improvement projects. U.S. Sen. Todd Young's office says a $9.2 million grant to Fort Wayne International Airport will be spent on an apron improvement project that's aimed at better operations and safety. The federal money will help expedite completion of the work. A grant of $8.9 million to Evansville Regional Airport will go toward improvements to its ramp infrastructure and the airfield drainage system. A reconstruction project is designed to prevent flooding and sinkhole development. The grants come from the Federal Aviation Administration's Airport Improvement Program. Young says the grants will help ensure the two airports continue to boost economic development in their regions.

Third zoo elephant tests positive for deadly virus

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Zoo says an African elephant has tested positive for a virus that earlier killed two other members of its herd. It said Thursday that 13-year-old male Kedar has tested positive for elephant endotheliotropic herpesvirus and is being treated for it. The zoo says it started testing the blood of each elephant twice a week after two elephants, Nyah and Kalina, died in March. Lab and pathology tests confirmed both elephants had EEHV, which causes fatal hemorrhagic disease in elephants. Zoo staff conducted a blood test for the virus on Kedar on May 2 and the results came back negative. The zoo says staff tested Kedar's blood again on Monday and the results came back positive. The zoo says humans and other animal species cannot contract the virus.

200 scholarships given to future teachers

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Commission for Higher Education has awarded 200 scholarships to its third class of Next Generation Hoosier Educators. The recipients, selected through a competitive process based on academic achievement and other factors, will receive $7,500 annually — up to $30,000 total — for committing to teach in Indiana for at least five years after graduating from college. The commission says 393 students applied for the 2019-20 scholarships, with applications coming from 212 high schools in 82 of the state's 92 counties. More than 80 percent of the applicants were Indiana high school seniors with the remainder comprised of current college students. To qualify, students had to either graduate in the top 20 percent of their high school class or earn a score in the top 20th percentile on the SAT or ACT.

Carbon dioxide storage signed by governor

INDIANAPOLIS — The governor has signed a bill allowing a company to go ahead with plans for potentially storing 50 million metric tons of carbon dioxide underground near Terre Haute. The carbon dioxide storage is part of a $450 million project proposed by Wabash Valley Resources LLC for an anhydrous ammonia fertilizer plant near Terre Haute. The bill signed Wednesday by Gov. Eric Holcomb restricts such carbon storage in Indiana to that site. The company says it plans to pump the carbon dioxide underground instead of releasing the greenhouse gas into the atmosphere. The project still needs a federal Environmental Protection Agency permit before work can begin. The new law also calls for a special legislative committee to review legal and environmental questions before allowing similar projects elsewhere.

Court upholds mother's 15-year term in death

TERRE HAUTE — An appeals court has upheld the 15-year prison sentence for a Terre Haute woman who pleaded guilty in the death of her disabled 5-year-old daughter. The Indiana Court of Appeals affirmed the sentence Thursday for 29-year-old Tiffany Daugherty after she pleaded guilty to neglect, theft and reckless homicide in the 2016 death of Adilynn Moseman. Her sentence also includes six years in community corrections. The appeals court noted that after Daugherty serves 10 years, she may petition the trial court to modify the remaining five years. Authorities say Daugherty and Adilynn's father, Brian Moseman, failed to provide adequate nutrition and medical care for their daughter, who had microcephaly. An autopsy found Adilynn died from malnutrition and bronchopneumonia. Moseman received a suspended five-year sentence for two counts of neglect.

Lawyer in alleged scheme enters plea

SOUTH BEND— A lawyer who formerly worked in northern Indiana and was charged with scamming elderly investors has pleaded guilty to another charge in the case. The South Bend Tribune reports 61-year-old Eric Marshall entered the plea Wednesday in federal court to bank fraud. He earlier pleaded guilty to one count of mail fraud and one count of securities fraud related to one client he allegedly defrauded. The newspaper says federal prosecutors intend to drop additional charges after Marshall's sentencing July 18. Marshall, formerly of South Bend and also known as Sven Eric Marshall, was arrested in January in Clearwater, Florida. He earlier was ordered to repay more than $2.5 million to clients. The U.S. attorney's office has said he ran an elder abuse scam through an investment company.

Buttigieg mayoral aide nominated to replace

SOUTH BEND — A top aide to Democratic presidential candidate Pete Buttigieg has won the party's primary to replace him as mayor of his hometown. James Mueller won the Democratic nomination for South Bend mayor with 37 percent of the vote Tuesday vote to comfortably lead a nine-candidate field. Mueller is the city's Department of Community Investment director and Buttigieg endorsed his high school classmate for the nomination. Buttigieg called Mueller's victory "good validation" of his administration's work in the 100,000-person city since he became mayor in 2012. The 37-year-old Buttigieg has become one of the hottest names among Democratic presidential hopefuls, positioning himself as face of a new generation. Mueller faces Republican Sean Haas, a high school teacher, in November's election.

Federal case to proceed against cops in case

ELKHART — Prosecutors are setting aside their case against two police officers who were caught on video repeatedly punching a handcuffed man so that a federal case against them can proceed. The Elkhart County prosecutor's office announced Thursday that state charges brought last year against Cory Newland and Joshua Titus are being dismissed, following a request from federal prosecutors. A federal grand jury in March indicted the Elkhart police officers on a charge of depriving Mario Ledesma of his rights through excessive force. Police video shows them punching Ledesma after he spat at Newland while sitting handcuffed in a chair at the police station in January 2018. Newland and Titus were placed on unpaid administrative leave after the federal indictment.

Continental Diamond Tool plans expansion

NEW HAVEN — A company that designs and makes cutting and grinding products and custom tooling in northeastern Indiana is moving forward on an expansion that includes adding more jobs. Officials announced Thursday that Continental Diamond Tool is investing $5.5 million to expand its manufacturing operations in New Haven as well as its research and development labs. The expansion is expected to be completed by July. The company expects to create up to about 225 jobs over the next four years. Continental Diamond Tool in October had announced plans for an expansion, but at the time job creation estimates were slightly lower. The company currently has about 130 fulltime employees. The Indiana Economic Development Corp. offered Continental Diamond Tool up to $1.2 million in conditional tax credits based on its plans.

$9M grant will target mental health in schools

FRANKFORT— Three school districts are sharing a $9 million federal grant aimed at increasing awareness of mental health issues. The grant will provide resources for public school districts in Bullitt, Henderson and Warren counties for the implementation of mental health policies and processes. Kentucky is one of only four states receiving the award. The grant was announced by the Kentucky Department of Education in partnership with the Cabinet for Health and Family Services. The partnership will work to enhance school mental health supports, provide youth

Judge blocks new filing deadline

FRANKFORT — A federal judge has temporarily blocked a new section of state law that the Libertarian Party says denied its candidates access to the statewide ballot this year. The ruling on Thursday applies to a provision moving up the filing deadline for third-party and independent candidates from April 1 to late January. The change was part of a measure that won legislative approval in March. It took effect after the governor signed it. The judge's order restores the April 1 deadline for this year's elections. The Libertarian Party says that means the secretary of state will accept their statements of candidacy, which were filed before April 1. Secretary of State Alison Lundergan Grimes' office says the judge made the right decision. She's challenging the same law in state court because it removed her power over the State Board of Elections.

Town picked for propane tank manufacturing plant

FRANKFORT — Officials say a company plans to put a propane tank manufacturing facility in a south-central town. The project is expected to create 175 full-time jobs in coming years. Gov. Matt Bevin's office said Wednesday that the $10-million-plus project by Manchester Tank & Equipment Co. is planned in Campbellsville. Officials say the company will acquire and retrofit an existing building to expand operations and for production and supply of components to the company's existing facilities. Manchester Tank is a division of McWane Inc. McWane's CEO and president, Ruffner Page, says the new Campbellsville operation will be a big contributor to the continued growth and success of Manchester Tank. State officials have preliminarily approved McWane for up to $2 million in performance-based tax incentives through the Kentucky Business Investment program.

Accused store shooter ruled incompetent

LOUISVILLE — A judge has ruled that a man accused of killing two black people at a grocery store is not mentally competent to stand trial on state charges, but that could change. The Courier Journal reports that Judge Annie O'Connell ruled Gregory Bush is incompetent to stand trial on state charges including murder and wanton endangerment. He has pleaded not guilty. O'Connell said Bush is likely to regain competency. She scheduled a July 24 hearing. A doctor testified Thursday that Bush likely would be found competent to stand trial in the future. Bush will receive medication at a psychiatric center. Bush has pleaded not guilty to federal hate crime charges in the October shootings of 69-year-old Maurice Stallar and 67-year-old Vickie Lee Jones at a Kroger in suburban Louisville.

3 ex-jail workers indicted in beating

LOUISVILLE — Three former corrections officers have been indicted in connection with the alleged beating of a handcuffed inmate at a Louisville jail. News outlets report a U.S. Department of Justice statement says the federal indictment Wednesday named David Schwartz, Devan Edwards and Donna Gentry. Schwartz is charged with violating an inmate's civil rights by assaulting the handcuffed inmate and writing false reports about the April 2018 incident. Edwards is charged for playing a role in the alleged assault. Gentry is charged with obstruction of justice. Gentry is accused of filing a false report and directing a subordinate to file a false report. Metro corrections director Mark Bolton fired Schwartz and Edwards after viewing video that appears to show Schwartz punching then-19-year-old inmate Terry Whitehead.

Retired miners rally over pensions in Washington

LOUISVILLE — Dozens of retired coal miners visited lawmakers in Washington to call for legislative action to preserve the pensions of about 87,000 retirees and another 20,000 working miners. United Mine Workers of America President Cecil Roberts says the 2008 recession and mining company bankruptcies have endangered the miners' pension plan, established in 1974. He says those two factors have drained about $6 billion from the fund. Several federal lawmakers, including West Virginia Sen. Joe Manchin, joined the miners for a news conference near the Capitol on Wednesday. Manchin has introduced a bill that would transfer money from the Abandoned Mine Land fund to shore up the pension. The bill, introduced in January, hasn't moved out of committee. Roberts says miners made the rounds on Capitol Hill, urging lawmakers to support the bill.

Police officer driving cruiser charged with DUI

CYNTHIANA — A police officer is accused of driving under the influence in a city police car. Lexington police Officer Jeffery Burden, 33, was relieved of his sworn duties and transferred to an administrative assignment while the case is investigated. The Lexington Herald-Leader reports Cynthiana police in Harrison County received a reckless driving complaint Tuesday morning involving a Lexington police cruiser that was failing to stay in its lane. An arrest citation says the cruiser reportedly nearly struck several signs. Police say Burden's cruiser entered a gas station and struck a red pole protecting the gas pumps. The arrest citation says Burden admitted he was taking Hydrocodone for back pain.

Student who sued over vaccination has disease

WALTON — The lawyer for a high school student who wasn't allowed to participate in school activities because he wasn't vaccinated for chickenpox says his client has now contracted the illness. Attorney Christopher Wiest of Covington told The Kentucky Enquirer that Jerome Kunkel, 18, came down with chickenpox last week. Wiest says Kunkel is "fine" and "a little itchy." After an outbreak, students who weren't vaccinated were ordered to stay away from Our Lady of the Assumption Church school and activities. Kunkel sued the Northern Kentucky Health Department, claiming the vaccine is against his religious beliefs, and others joined in. A judge last month denied the request to return to activities. Wiest said Tuesday about half his clients have contracted chickenpox since filing the case. He said he told parents that a child's getting chickenpox would be the quickest way to resolve the case, since a bout of chickenpox confers immunity. The Health Department said in a news release Wednesday that Wiest's statement was "alarming and disappointing." The department said people who contract chickenpox can expose others to the virus before the disease becomes apparent. Kentucky Gov. Matt Bevin said in March during an interview on Bowling Green radio station WKCT that he deliberately exposed his children to chickenpox so they would catch the disease and become immune. The Republican governor said parents worried about chickenpox should have their children vaccinated but suggested that government shouldn't mandate the vaccination. Kentucky requires that children entering kindergarten be vaccinated for chickenpox, but parents may seek religious exemptions or provide proof that a child already had the disease.

Mike Braun and those giant Senate shoes

By BRIAN A. HOWEY

NASHVILLE, Ind. — Last week I regaled you with the legacies of the Senate lions, the late Birch Bayh and Richard Lugar. Their passing occurred just months after Indiana's newest senator, Republican Mike Braun, followed in their giant footsteps.

In the television age of politics, only nine white guys have made it to the U.S. Senate from Indiana.

Our new senators tend to arrive in crisis atmosphere, whether it was the assassination of President Kennedy 11 months after Sen. Birch Bayh was sworn in, the shooting of President Reagan three months after Dan Quayle took the oath, or President Clinton's impeachment that prompted Sen. Evan Bayh's first votes.

Sen. Mike Braun came to Washington with the federal government shut down, in a standoff over immigration between President Trump and congressional Democrats. It was a "crisis" that pales in comparison to the thunderclap immediacy of gunshots and impeachment, but it is a sclerosis that has created historic dysfunction at a time of global duress, whether it be climate change, rising super powers or a rapidly aging population. All of these issues will test the viability of our republic in the coming years.

Braun won office by sporting a blue shirt sans tie, dispatched three sitting Members of Congress along the way with a cranky attitude that endeared him to many Hoosiers who are fed up with bovine scatology that has become federal governance.

Upon arrival, he described Congress as a "gummed up" creature with an array of "tricky dynamics," where even a good idea like criminal justice reform can take more than a decade to pass. For a business CEO used to making a decision, fostering implementation and gauging real-time results, this has got to be the proverbial wake-up call.

Won't the Senate drive Mike Braun nuts?

"Yes, that's frustrating," Braun acknowledged, saying he will have to "slow" his "metabolism and get used to that." He adds, "But I kind of knew that going into it. You have a big microphone to talk about things. I'm not going to sit back."

I mentioned to Braun that there are "stunt" congressmen and women and senators who make a speech or take a vote just to burnish a point. House Republicans took 60 votes to repeal Obamacare, though none stood a chance of passing and they never came up with a viable alternative to replace. And then there are the Bayhs and Lugars who actually get things done.

After getting to Washington, Braun did have a blunt message for his Republicans colleagues: Don't spout off about repealing Obamacare until you come up with a plan to replace.

Braun's victory over Sen. Joe Donnelly last fall was forged, in part, due to his actions as a CEO at Meyer Industries in Jasper that resulted in substantial health insurance savings to his company and employees.

Might this green, newbie senator become the catalyst to take his theories as a CEO and forge a true "replace" on health care?

He's begun to forge relationships with freshmen Sens. Rick Scott, a former Florida governor and health care executive, and Mitt Romney, who came up with his version of Obamacare as governor of Massachusetts.

Braun has filed several bills aimed at the health insurance industry that will create transparency and, he hopes, forge ways to reduce drug costs. He uses Sen. Bernie Sanders' "Medicare for all" as a dose of reality for the industry.

"I want to create a system that engages individuals to have some skin in the game," Braun said, echoing a frequent campaign quote of his. "Otherwise, the only way it can work is if the government does it for us, because it's the only cudgel with a heavy hand to take on the health care industry.

I'm trying to prod the industry to be welcoming of transparency and competition, starting with drug prices. So they're forced to throw that information out there and then individuals with some skin in the game have incentives to shop around."

He added, "I'm working on the industry first of all." His message is this: "You know this can't keep going." The status quo is unsustainable, particularly with the demographic Baby Boom bulge about to stress out the entire system with a wave of retirements and the inevitable life end games. Medicare is fiscally unsustainable.

Has he talked to President Trump about his health reforms?

Braun recalled that at the end of a recent meeting with Senate Republicans, President Trump said, "By the way, Republicans are going to lead on health care." That quote produced instant heartburn for Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, who responded with the look of a man who had just swallowed a mouse.

"That's because we weren't ready," Braun said. "But we're all talking together and hopefully we'll get a plan together that gets fleshed out before 2020 that we can talk about, or the Democrats will win the discussion again."

So here's my hope, that Sen. Braun really does take what he called his "real world experiences," and grows into the giant footsteps of Birch Bayh and Dick Lugar.

He builds relationships within his caucus and with Democrats, forges a realistic Obamacare alternative, and figures out how to build consensus to get it into law.

We don't need another stunt senator. We need new leaders.

Trump's one-on-one approach to China has dangerous implications

By CHARLES HANKLA

Not too long ago, President Donald Trump seemed to be on the cusp of a trade deal with China. A couple of threatening tweets and an escalation of tariffs later, the odds of ending the 16-month-old U.S.-China trade war anytime soon have dropped dramatically.

Whether or not American and Chinese trade negotiators ultimately salvage a deal — they are still planning to meet in the coming days — the episode highlights drawbacks in Trump's trade strategy, which tends to be protectionist, confrontational and negotiated one on one.

Unfortunately, Trump's policies are only an acceleration of a trend in international trade that's been going on for several decades. It's a move away from multilateralism — in which many countries agree on certain trading principles — and toward bilateralism — which pits nation against nation, raising the stakes.

I am a specialist in the politics of trade. My observations lead me to believe that the increasing abandonment of multilateralism will have pernicious long-term consequences. Not only will trade become more costly for businesses and consumers, it may even make the planet a more dangerous place.

WORLD TRADE — TRUMP STYLE

Before we can understand what has changed, we need to revisit how trade deals have historically been done.

In the decades following World War II, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was the center of gravity for trade negotiations. While that system wasn't perfect, most of the world's countries could at least participate, to one degree or another, in hammering out the rules of trade.

This multilateral trading order reached its heyday in 1995, with the creation of the World Trade Organization (WTO). But more recently, the system has weakened. Today, most of the world's new agreements are struck between only two countries or within a single region.

Trump has shown little appetite for continuing the multilateral negotiations his predecessors were working on. He's also hammered on regional accords, famously renegotiating the North American Free Trade Agreement and withdrawing from the Trans-Pacific Partnership.

Trump's clear preference is for bilateral deals where the U.S. can use its market power to force concessions from its negotiating partners. But Trump has added a level of confrontation and antagonism to world trade not known in the postwar era.

For evidence, look no further than his use of threats during the recent trade talks and his decision to raise tariffs on hundreds of billions of dollars of Chinese goods on May 10, which is expected to prompt retaliation from China.

In essence, the United States under Trump has begun to see itself as the victim, rather than the guarantor, of the liberal trading order. This new perspective has made American negotiators more willing to extract temporary concessions from trading partners, even when these come at the cost of destabilizing the system as a whole.

RULES UPON RULES

One pernicious consequence of abandoning multilateralism is the mounting complexity and discriminatory nature of global trading arrangements.

In international trade, the fewer rules there are the better. One real benefit of the WTO system is that the same rules, more or less, apply to everyone.

But the world's increasing rejection of multilateralism is creating a complex web of trade regulations that are tremendously hard to navigate. The number of preferential trade agreements jumped from just over 50 in 1990 to nearly 300 in 2010.

More deals like these mean that one set of rules is overlaid by more rules that only apply when trading with specific countries in certain goods and services. For this reason, the economist Jagdish Bhagwati has called bilateral deals "termites in the trading system."

These "termites" and the informational burdens they create have real costs for companies and consumers, whether in Europe, Asia or the United States. And this growing complexity weakens competition by giving certain companies an edge over others based on their national origin, distorting the efficiency of global markets.

In the end, these burdens can discourage smaller companies from engaging in global commerce, make it more expensive for even the largest businesses and drive up the cost of products for consumers.

TRADE CONFLICTS

A second drawback to Trump's approach is that it increases the risk of war, at least over the long term.

As the political economist David Lake has pointed out, one purpose of the trading system that the U.S. helped set up after World War II was to forestall mutually antagonistic trading blocs like the ones built by Adolf Hitler or, earlier, by the European and Japanese colonial powers.

The origins of the two world wars may have been principally political, but there is little doubt that economic conflicts between blocs contributed to the military tensions.

During the postwar era, the multilateral system took a major step toward insulating trade from such international disputes and strategic competition. Outside of relations with the communist bloc, which only later participated in multilateral trade deals, there is ample reason to believe that economic interdependence helped produce the "long peace" of that period.

For this reason, we should all be worried about the wobbly state of the global trading system. Bilateral and regional deals are making it easier for large countries to use trade policy more explicitly as an arm of foreign and military policy.

Modern bilateral deals are not recreating the colonial systems of the past, but they do tend to center on major powers in what some scholars have called a "hub" and "spoke" pattern. The "hub" often enjoys significant influence over the "spoke," and not just in commercial affairs. China's overtures to African countries over a free trade deal, for example, are likely linked to its strategic interest in securing access to national resources.

While I'm not suggesting that these deals are likely to trigger a shooting war anytime soon, an increasingly fractured world will gradually reduce interdependence among countries — which can act as a strong incentive to avoid a fight.

If the rising number of bilateral deals become an instrument of security policy, and trade increasingly flows only to strategically friendly countries, we should all prepare for more violent conflict in the future.

Trump's foreign policy challenges mounting around the world

By CATHERINE LUCEY and ROBERT BURNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — New North Korea missile tests. A trade standoff with China. Fresh nuclear tensions with Iran.

President Donald Trump's foreign policy challenges are mounting around the world, showing the limits of his self-touted ability to make a deal and perhaps the difficulty of focusing primarily on domestic concerns for his "America first" administration.

They're also forcing him into some contorted positions, for example, backing regime change in Venezuela without any displays of force and saying he's open to talks with Iran while dispatching an aircraft carrier and bombers to the Middle East.

Staring down high-stakes diplomacy worldwide, Trump says his efforts are working.

Still, Trump has plenty of unfinished business. Since taking office, he has specialized in publicly hectoring friendly partners, embracing foes and resisting too much advice. Critics have labeled him an unreliable force, while allies say he has followed through on a promise to disrupt foreign policy norms.

Trump inherited some of his foreign policy problems, such as North Korea, Syria and Afghanistan, but has yet to solve them. And his hands-on approach to North Korea, holding the first meetings between a U.S. president and that country's leader, has not yielded a deal to curtail North Korea's nuclear missile program.

On other fronts, Trump has turned up the heat. His trade clash with China remains unresolved as he brandishes additional tariff hikes. With Iran, Trump pulled the U.S. out of the nuclear deal that the Obama administration had negotiated along with five other world powers, and he recently increased the pressure, designating Iran's Revolutionary Guard Corps a terrorist organization and deploying military forces to the Persian Gulf. He said Thursday that he would like to get a call from Iran's leaders to negotiate.

Cliff Kupchan, chairman of Eurasia Group, described China and Iran as the two most pressing issues for the U.S. But he noted that Trump's moves are not unexpected.

"With China and Iran, we're seeing a strategically very predictable president play out his hand," he said. Still, he said that handling the range of challenges proves that the administration can manage to "walk and chew gum at the same time."

Speaking to reporters on Thursday, Trump rattled through some of the top concerns. He said the U.S. was looking "very seriously right now" at North Korea's recent military tests. On trade talks with China, he said the U.S. would be fine either way, but said Chinese President Xi Jinping wrote him a "beautiful" letter. And amid a rising clash with Iran, he declared, "we have information that you don't want to know about."

Other pressing issues include the economic and political crisis in Venezuela. The United States and other nations have recognized opposition leader Juan Guaidó as interim president, but a recent effort to encourage an uprising against President Nicolás Maduro failed. Also on the horizon is a blueprint for Middle East peace from Trump senior adviser and son-in-law Jared Kushner, as well as the possibility of peace talks with the Taliban to end the 18-year war in Afghanistan.

Trump, who ran on limiting U.S. engagement abroad, has stressed his interest in domestic policymaking. Michael O'Hanlon, an analyst at the Brookings Institution, said a unifying theme of Trump's approach is his unwillingness to commit to more wars.

"I think so far we continue to see reluctance on the part of Trump to get involved in new military operations — which is mostly a good instinct — but a willingness to brandish nonmilitary instruments" of national power, as well as assertive shows of military force with no serious intention of taking pre-emptive military action, O'Hanlon said in an email Thursday.

Trump also stressed that he was calling the shots. Asked if he lines up with hawkish national security adviser John Bolton, he said "I'm the one who tempers him, which is OK," and added: "Ultimately I make the decision."

That lines up with a central emphasis of Trump's foreign policy, which is that he always has the final word. His advisers have shifted during his term, and he is now on his second secretary of state and third national security adviser. On Thursday, the White House said Trump will nominate Patrick Shanahan to succeed Jim Mattis as defense secretary, ending an audition period for Shanahan that began in January.

In a sign Shanahan remains focused on Trump's top security issue — building a wall on the U.S.-Mexican border — Shanahan is scheduled to travel to the border on Saturday, even as he juggles the Iran, Venezuela and North Korea problems.

Carole Sloan

She was born Feb. 27, 1939, in Madison, to Melvin James and Martha Madge Oldaker Yater. In 1957, she graduated from Madison High School, where she was a Custer Oratorical Contest winner; class officer; and a member of the band, Girls' Athletic Association, Sunshine Club and the Honor Society. She was an active member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority at Hanover College from which she graduated in 1961. She received her master's degree in elementary education from Indiana University Southeast in 1971. She began her teaching career in Martinsville, Indiana, before returning to Madison, where she taught at E.O. Muncie. She then stayed home with her children for several years before working at the optometry office of her husband, Dr. David Weeks Sloan. Returning to education she taught for 20 years at Southwestern Elementary in Hanover. As a child, she attended Trinity United Methodist and Madison Presbyterian churches. Later she became a member of Christ Episcopal Church, where she was an involved parishioner, serving on the Vestry and Altar Guild. In 1974, She and her husband went on a Volunteer Optometrist in Service to Humanity mission trip to Haiti to provide examinations and glasses. Together they also participated in the Madison Ulster Project and traveled to Ireland in 2005 to attend its international conference. She was involved in several other community organizations including Hanover Chapter 525 of the Order of the Eastern Star, Tri Kappa Women's Sorority, Indiana Teachers' Association, Indiana Retired Teachers' Association, and Historic Madison Inc. She was active in Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts as a leader. She served as a docent for Historic Madison, Inc. She was also host mother to six exchange students from four countries: Horacio, Johanna, Sandra, Sara, Rocio, and Jan. She was an avid reader, card player, theater lover, world traveler, IU basketball fan and lover of fine wine.

She is survived by her children: Sheila Butler of Bloomington, Indiana, Eric Prime and Shelli Anderson, both of Bargersville, Indiana, and Shannon Dattilo of Madison; 12 grandchildren; her "sister" cousin, Sarah Jane Green of Hanover; and several other cousins.

She was preceded in death by her husband, who died in 2013; and her parents.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Saturday, May 18, 2019, Christ Episcopal Church. Inurnment will follow immediately afterward at the church columbarium.

Visitation will be at Lytle Welty Funeral Homes & Cremation Service, Vail Chapel, Friday, May 17, 2019, from 4 p.m. until 7 p.m.

The Hanover Chapter 525 of the Order of the Eastern Star will honor Carole with a special ceremony at 6:45 p.m. at the funeral home.

to her house "is the foot path to the Salvation Army."

Coming from the alley, she said, are "fights, arguments, cussing, loud yelling."

She said neighbors went to the Zoning Board of Appeals in February and were told that Victoria Inn is zoned GB, or general business, so apartments are allowed, and to go to the City Council if the business is a nuisance.

"Tell us what you are doing … and how you will keep us safe," she said.

Melanie Otten lives on East Main Street a short distance from Victoria Inn. "All the foot traffic comes in front of or behind my house," she said. "It sleeps in my yard or in my garage, where we have to get the police to remove them. We have no warning that they're there. I open my garage, there's a man that's decided to move in. Victoria Inn would only take him part-time. We have people that will come to our house and threaten to burn it down if we do not find them drugs, give them cigarettes. We witness drug deals on our front porch.

"It's a never-ending cycle," Otten said. "I go to cut the grass. I have to check my yard to see if there's someone laying on it. I have to check for needles before I can let this one (her toddler granddaughter, whom she was holding) play in the yard. I have to check and see if they are screaming at the Victoria Inn." She said a toddler cannot be punished for repeating what she heard. "I have to check my gazebo and see if there's needles or human excrement in it."

Only about 25 feet are between Victoria Inn and Beverly and Bob Armstrong's home.

"We've just been begging for help," Beverly Armstrong said.

She said she and her husband find needles on their front step if addicts sat there to get high. Twice a man walked into their house. If she and her husband sit on their porch, she said, they take a stun gun with them. It doesn't end: "They bang on our door at night," she said.

"It's really getting desperate," she said.

Suzan and Gary Duckworth have seen open drug dealing, drug use, domestic violence, "lewd behavior" "and now we've had attempted murder" near their home, Gary Duckworth said. This year there have been eight calls to 911 from Victoria Inn, 38 domestic violence cases, 21 drug arrests and 30 thefts, Suzan Duckworth said.

"It seems like it continues to escalate and gets worse," she said.

Bauer said it stops with her. "I'm kicking ass and taking names," she said.

Rembrandt's license advances

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Soecial to the Courier

An application for Rembrandt's Gallery and Wine Bar to get a three-way liquor license has been sent to the state for consideration after the City Council voted Wednesday to recommend it.

Bob Maile's application had been tabled at a previous meeting after council member Darrell Henderson raised questions.

His questions included whether Maile could meet guidelines for creation and retention of jobs because Rembrandt's has no employees. Instead, Maile hires a company that handles all employee matters.

City attorney Joe Jenner told council members they could attach whatever weight they wanted to each part of the guidelines.

Supporters of Maile's application told council members that if the guidelines were so troublesome, perhaps the council should change the guidelines. Other speakers backed the way Maile runs his business by outsourcing human resources as being as being acceptable and not uncommon.

The vote to recommend state approval was 6-1, with Henderson voting no.

During the discussion, council member Laura Hodges said she will introduce a change so that the City Council would not be part of decision-making process on liquor licenses.

• No fees

Studebaker and Bonnie Hensler, MCS director of finance and human resources, began working last year to find a way to help parents cover costs of the supplies for students in kindergarten through eighth grade.

"Last year we were working on the development of the supplies lists," said Studebaker. "The list ranged anywhere from $50 to $100 for that stuff…I made it a goal to get rid of that expense then and there."

Studebaker and Hensler have been working since to try to find ways to eliminate this cost to parents. Their efforts grew into a search for ways to cover the costs of textbook rentals and technology fees for those families who do not already qualify for free or reduced fees.

"The SuperATV agreement allows them to make a donation to us every quarter…we felt like it would be a perfect use of some of that money," said Studebaker. "SuperATV's money already pays for Ivy Tech tuition money, allowed last year to start sliding scale for pre-K costs, start a pilot program at Deputy Elementary for after-school care with sliding scale…"

The donations being used in this new way are expected to save parents about $132,500 in supply costs for the more than 1,700 enrolled Kindergarten through eight grade students. Supply lists are not generated for high school students.

Book and technology fees range between $200 and $400 per student — a variety of factors decide exactly how much a student's fees may be including their grade level and which courses they sign up for when they are old enough to choose between different electives.

When parents register their children next fall, they will still receive an invoice, but there will be a credit for the amount of their child's fees, bringing their balance due to $0. The supplies Kindergarten through eighth grade students are typically expected to bring with them on the first day of school will already be waiting for them at school, already paid with the donated funds.

"We are forever grateful for the generosity of SuperATV and Mr. Harold Hunt," MCS administrators said in an email. "Mr. Hunt has been a valuable partner in education for all students at Madison through SuperATV's support of our Ivy Tech partnership helping to cover the cost of tuition for students, he is an avid supporter of our CTE programming (Career Technical Education) where he opens his doors for students and encourages them to begin working in internships learning all aspects of the business, and actively supports our Cub Manufacturing and Cub Engineering programs by providing members of his leadership team to serve as advisers and mentors to our students."

of the reaction of some by students and parents, that parent told the Courier.

However, Barlow was not in the classroom Monday and Tuesday. Gasaway said in his letter to parents that Barlow was not there those two days and returned Wednesday.

Gasaway said Barlow will finish out the remainder of the 2018-19 school year in the Science Department.

"Any and all decisions with Mr. Barlow, pertaining to his employment and/or discipline, has been handled internally and communicated with our proper chain of command, which is with Dr. (Jeff) Studebaker (the Madison schools superintendent).

"This is a teachable moment for a young teacher," Gasaway said.

He also told parents in his letter that they are welcome to reach out to discuss concerns but that he is not able to "discuss with you about Mr. Barlow's personnel record."

Parents who discussed the situation with the Courier did not want their names used.

One parent said students said they were upset about the video being shown in class and also said students were asked after they saw the videos to participate in a show-of-hands vote on whether they supported or did not support abortion.

The parent who said no discussion took place provided a differing account from many of those on Facebook conversations and others those who spoke with the Courier earlier this week.

Her child told her, she said, that Barlow began the class with a disclaimer — the videos he was going to show would be "graphic." He said he had tried to find videos to provide "accurate information about how the procedure occurs."

The parent said her child said Barlow was open and provided the class with many details before showing the videos and gave students the option not to watch. They could have left before the video began or during it if they grew uncomfortable, the parent said. Her child reported to her that some students in her class did leave before the video started and that others left during. Her child stayed through the whole video, but turned away from the screen at times.

She said her child's class was not asked to vote if they were on one side of the pro-choice/pro-life debate or the other.

Gasaway said Barlow posed the hypothetical question to students, but was not asking them to vote or make their personal views public. Gasaway said Barlow believes students misunderstood his intent and perceived the fact he was taking notes of the show of hands they may have been on one side of the argument or the other. Gasaway said he was not.

Gasaway said he talked with four parents about the incident. He said two that called were not upset that the video had been shown.

He said seven students had spoken with him about it, out of more than 100 students who saw the content through the different sections of Biology I and II classes that met that day.

Five of the seven students, said Gasaway, were upset by the content of the second nearly half-hour long video. Many of the students that came to him started the conversation by saying how much they like Barlow as a teacher.

The Planned Parenthood video was described by several parents who were concerned about the situation as two minutes in length. A parent said students described that video as informative and cartoonish visually.

The second video, those parents said, was described by their children as a "late-term abortion through an ultrasound." Some used the word "graphic" to describe the video. The 30-minute-long video, is called The Silent Scream. ChoicesNew, which published the video to YouTube in April 2012, described it as "a 1984 anti-abortion documentary video directed and narrated by Bernard Nathanson, an obstetrician, NARAL Pro-Choice America founder, and abortion provider turned pro-life activist, and produced in partnership with the National Right to Life Committee.[1] The film depicts the abortion process via ultrasound and shows an abortion taking place in the uterus. During the abortion process, the fetus is described as appearing to make outcries of pain and discomfort. The video has been a popular tool used by the pro-life campaign in arguing against abortion,[2] although it has been criticized as misleading by members of the medical community.[3]."

Gasaway said teachers are autonomous in designing their lesson plans — that they can tailor them to best fit their teaching style and the students' learning styles. But there are situations where they can make mistakes in trying to find the best way to present content to students.

"Teachers are adults and adults can make mistakes, too," said Gasaway. "We're going to learn from this and move on."

To further address any worries of participation grades for last Friday, Gasaway said he used his authority as the building's top administrator to make the day's grades null and void.

Barlow joined the MCS faculty last December. He was issued an emergency teaching permit on Nov. 19, 2018. That permit will expire on June 30, 2019, according to the Indiana Department of Education's Indiana Educator License Lookup.

Gasaway said the school would be taking all comments and explanations in Barlow's place so that "he can focus on moving on, teaching and finish the last 15 days of the school year strong."

Electrical pole fire, outage

Ross Street between Hargan and Highland drives was closed Thursday afternoon after an electrical pole and power lines caught fire. Many homes, mostly west of Ross lost power as a result. Duke Energy arrived shortly after Madison Fire Department personnel and put the flames out with an extinguisher. Duke said there were about 130 customers without power Thursday afternoon. Nearby residents reported hearing a large bang then losing power. The cause of the fire was unknown Thursday. (Courier staff photo by Tali Hunt)

Milton Hill crash

Kentucky State Police responded to a wreck around 10:30 a.m. on Thursday, May 9 for a multiple-vehicle wreck on Milton Hill in Trimble County, Kentucky. The crash happened near the bottom of Milton Hill, causing one vehicle to drive off the hill into a fence between the Milton BP and the Tobacco & Candy Outlet. Identifications and further information have not been made available. (Courier staff photos by Elisabeth Moore)

3 new deputies sworn in to sheriff's office

The Jefferson County Sheriff's Office welcomed three new road deputies to their ranks Wednesday evening. A crowd of several dozen gathered to watch Circuit Court Judge D.J. Mote lead them through their oaths of office in the Circuit courtroom. Deputies Jordan Perry (center), Curtis Shelpman (left) and Brett White (right) bring mixed experiences. Perry and White have both been with the sheriff's office — working as part of the county's jail staff. Shelpman worked as part of the management team at Walmart in Madison and served in the military before that. Road deputies must pass physical and written tests as part of the hiring process. The new road deputies will begin training at the acadmey as early as September. (WKM News photo)

186th Hanover College commencement will be May 25

Courier staff report

Hanover College will celebrate its 186th commencement, Saturday, May 25, with the conferral of degrees to the 224 members of the Class of 2019. The ceremony will begin at 10 a.m. at The Point.

Hanover President Lake Lambert will present opening remarks. Mark Levett, class of 1971, chair of the board of trustees will offer greetings from the board.

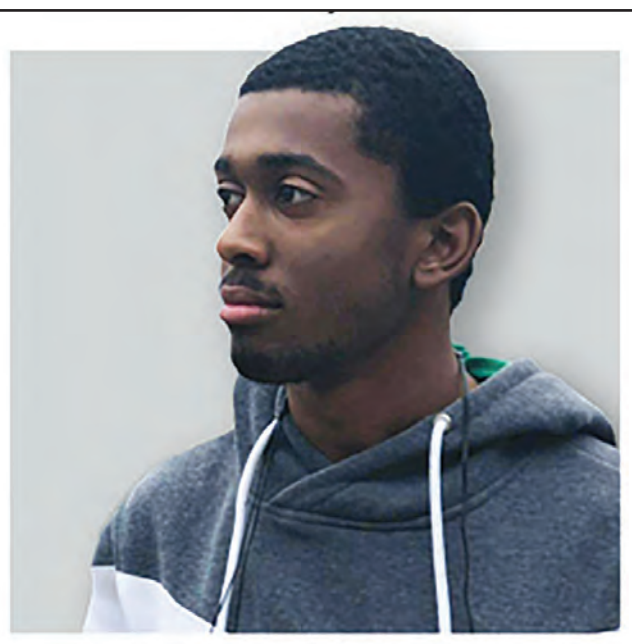
James "Rusty" Rueff Jr., an acclaimed Silicon Valley investor, adviser, author, podcast host and venture coach for startup companies, will receive an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters.

Rueff attended Hanover for two years before transferring to Purdue. While at Hanover, he participated as part of the college's theatre department and appeared in two plays, including "Madwoman of Chaillot" and "Love's Labor's Lost."

Ian Jiles, a senior from Indianapolis, will deliver the class address.

Jiles has served the campus community as member of Kaleidoscope, Love Out Loud and Feminist Club. He is also a contributor to "Kennings," the College's artistic and literary magazine.

The Hanover College Choir will perform selections by Darla Eshelman and Chester Alwes, and lead the class in the singing of Meredith Willson's "The Alma Mater." Under the direction of Madlen Batchvarova, professor of music, the group also includes members of Hanover's faculty and staff.



Ian Jiles

The Hanover College Instrumental Ensemble, directed by David Mruzek, associate professor of music, will perform processional and recessional medleys. The ensemble consists of Hanover students and faculty, as well as area community members and high school students.

Marshals for the commencement ceremony will be Ann Kirkland, professor of French; Dan Murphy, professor of history; and Ruth Turner, professor of political science.

Graduation activities will begin at 6 p.m., Friday, May 24, with the College's traditional baccalaureate service in Fitzgibbon Recital Hall, Lynn Center for Fine Arts.

The Rev. Christopher Henry will deliver the baccalaureate address. Henry is senior pastor at Second Presbyterian Church in Indianapolis.

The Rev. Catherine Y.E. Knott, Hanover's chaplain, will perform the benediction and invocation. Madeline Rathgeber Meyer, a senior from Ramsey, and Samuel Pyle, a junior from Goshen, Kentucky, will read scripture.

The service will also feature the Hanover College Choir and an anthem by composer Josephine Poelinitz.

Live coverage of Hanover's commencement will air at hanover.edu/live

If inclement weather occurs, commencement will take place in Collier Arena. Tickets are required for entry if the ceremony is indoors. The tickets, in limited supply, are free and available through all graduating seniors. Free parking will be available throughout campus. Shuttle service will be available for individuals with disabilities or other special needs. No traffic will be permitted near The Point before and during the ceremony.

RUEFF TO RECEIVE HONORARY DEGREE

Courier staff report

Hanover College will present James Russell "Rusty" Rueff Jr. with a Doctor of Humane Letters during its 186th commencement ceremony. The conferral of the honorary degree is in recognition of Rueff's leadership and support for the arts.

James "Rusty" Rueff Jr.

An acclaimed investor, adviser, author, podcast host and venture coach for start-up companies, Rueff is a native of Jeffersonville. He is a founding board director of the GRAMMY Music Education Coalition and past board chair of the Grammy Foundation in Los Angeles. He previously served as chief executive officer of SNOCAP Inc, and was an executive vice president for Electronic Arts and PepsiCo.

In addition to his roles as adviser and investor, Rueff has served, or serves now, on the corporate boards of such ventures as Glassdoor, HireVue, runcoach, Alioth Talent and The Union Social Club. He is also the co-founder of Tech for America, an organization that accelerates solutions to public problems by connecting Silicon Valley innovators with public leaders at local, state, and national levels.

Rueff is a member of the Academy of Television and Radio Sciences and the National Association of Recording Arts and Sciences. Madison names Wilkerson to lead boys basketball

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Sherron Wilkerson's week didn't get off to the best start. On Monday, while commuting from his home in Louisville to his job in Madison, Wilkerson hit a deer for the first time in his life.

"I was just cruising along, singing to the radio to be honest, and it just came out of nowhere," said Wilkerson, reciting the familiar lament of everybody who has had the misfortune of striking a deer with their car. "I told my wife, 'Man, this week is off to a bad start. Hopefully this isn't an omen of things to come.'"

As it turns out, Wilkerson's week ended up getting a whole lot better. After years of trying, Wilkerson finally landed a job he has coveted for years when he was named the new head boys basketball coach at Madison Consolidated High School on Wednesday.

Wilkerson has worked at the Vehicle Service Group in Madison for the past 12 years and the last two times the coaching job has come open, he has applied only to miss out.

"It's funny how things work out. They say third time is the charm," said Wilkerson, who was approved by the Madison School Board of Trustees by a 5-0 vote. "It's just a testament to the fact that sometimes things don't go the way you want. But if you keep pushing, things can work out. I hope by this process I can use this as a motivating factor for our guys."

Wilkerson was a standout athlete at Jeffersonville High School where he was a McDonald's All-American in 1993 and briefly Mr. Basketball before heading to Indiana University and eventually Rio Grande University in Ohio, where he graduated with a Bachelor's Degree in 1996. After a four-year professional playing career overseas, Wilkerson got into coaching, first as head coach of Herron Charter School in Indianapolis for a season and later with stops at Indiana University Southeast, Lamar University, Lincoln Trail College and back home to his alma mater, Jeffersonville High School.

He spent last season across town at Shawe Memorial High School as head coach where the Hilltoppers went 4-19 before he announced his resignation after the season.

Wilkerson freely admits that coaching at a small school like Shawe proved to be a culture shock and that while he loved the school and the people, it just wasn't the right fit for him.

"Shawe is an absolutely wonderful place with wonderful people and a wonderful school academically and I even think athletically they have an opportunity to do special things there," Wilkerson said. "For me personally, I see the game at such a high level and going from a professional mentality to a 1A mentality is a really, really tough transition and I'll be honest, I thought I would be able to maintain that mentality. But it was really tough from that aspect."

Wilkerson wasn't looking for another head coaching job after leaving Shawe and even when the Madison job

Rebels fall to Milan, grind out 3-hit win over Eastern

By DAVID CAMPBELL

Southwestern's defense didn't commit any errors, but the Rebels made enough mental mistakes to lead to several Milan runs that proved to be the difference in an 8-4 softball loss Thursday in Hanover.

Whether it was throwing to the wrong base, misjudging pop-ups or failing to call off another fielder, the Rebels simply made too many mistakes to overcome.

"We didn't fundamentally do the right thing and it's costing us extra runs," Southwestern coach Duane Ralston said. "We take away maybe three fundamental mistakes and (Milan) is not scoring as much. Now, we've got to score more, but we've just got to clean that stuff up. We've proven that we can put zeroes on the board and that we can play good defense. We just have to play good defense for seven innings."

Milan (10-10, 7-4 Ohio River Valley) scored all of its runs in the first four innings. The Indians struck in the first when back-to-back singles at the top of the lineup netted a run with Courtney Bruns scoring on a dropped third strike.

Southwestern came right back in the bottom of the first to take the lead thanks to Milan's own mistakes. Abby Fulton reached on a two-base error and Morgan Mahoney ripped a ball down the right-field line that went for an RBI triple. Mahoney then scored on the play when the throw back into the infield was thrown away.

But the Indians added four runs in the second thanks to back-to-back doubles by Cassie Franklin and Taryn Cline, then got an RBI single by Mackinze Deffinger in the third and a two-run single by Kaitlyn Tuttle in the fourth for an 8-2 lead.

Southwestern's defense tightened after the fourth allowing pitcher Kailey Burns to find her groove and set down eight of the last nine Indians in order. But by that time, the damage had been done.

Southwestern tried to chip away, scoring two runs in the bottom of the fourth when Fulton scored on Trinity McLain's RBI groundout and Olivia Bruce scored on a wild pitch to close the gap to 8-4.

But Southwestern stranded a runner at third in the fifth and two in scoring position in the seventh to fall by four.

Burns allowed eight earned runs on 12 hits in seven innings and walked three, but Ralston was pleased with the way she pitched.

"When you struggle defensively it puts a lot of pressure on the pitcher," Ralston said. "I thought once we settled down, she pitched really well. It helps when you're making plays."

Abby Ralston went 2-for-4 with three stolen bases while Bruce and Burns each collected hits.

Bruns, Franklin, Tuttle, Cline and Hailey Smith each had two hits for Milan with Cline hitting two doubles, Bruns stealing two bases, and Franklin and Tuttle each driving in two runs.

RBI double in 6th by Hunter Kennett lifts Shawe to second win

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hunter Kennett drove in the winning run with a double in the top of the sixth inning to lift Shawe baseball to a 4-3 win at New Washington on Wednesday.

The Hilltoppers trailed 2-0 early after the host Mustangs scored two in the first inning but came roaring back in the fifth to take the lead.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Walker Kennett opened the Shawe fifth by reaching on an error and promptly stole second base. Hunter Kennett was then hit by a pitch and Matthew Binzer laced an RBI single to score Walker to get the Hilltoppers on the board.

Cazden Nott then plated Hunter Kennett with a sacrifice fly to right and Nate Pawlak singled to drive in Binzer and put Shawe on top 3-2.

New Washington tied the score with a run in the bottom of the fifth but Shawe came right back in the top of the sixth. Christian Whitham singled to open the inning and Hunter Kennett doubled to drive him home for what proved to be the winning run.

Pawlak allowed just one earned run on eight hits in seven innings with three strikeouts and two walks to pick up the win. He was also 3-for-4 at the plate.

Nott and Henry Grote added hits for the Hilltoppers.

Shawe (2-14) was to host Class A No. 4 Rising Sun Friday.

No. 3 Columbus East stops Cubs 7-0 on two-hitter

Madison baseball was held to just two hits and committed three crucial errors in a 7-0 loss to Class 4A No. 3 Columbus East Wednesday in the consolation semifinals of the Hoosier Hills Conference tourney in Columbus.

The Olympians scored two runs in each of the first two innings to take a 4-0 lead and added a solo run in the fifth and two more in the sixth for the final margin.

Madison managed just two singles, both by Gabe True, against East starter Clayton Taylor, who struck out eight and walked one in the complete-game effort. The Cubs' Mason Welsh also went the distance, allowing just two earned runs while walking two to take the loss.

Julian Greenwell was 4-for-4 with a double and two RBI to lead the Olympians at the plate.

Madison, now 7-9 overall and losers of seven of their last eight, was to host Seymour in the HHC seventh-place game on Friday.

Pacers comeback from 9-1 deficit just falls short

Switzerland County baseball almost erased an eight-run deficit only to end up on the wrong side of a 14-12 loss to South Ripley Thursday in Vevay.

Picking up on a game suspended by weather last week, Switzerland County found itself trailing 9-1 after the visiting Raiders scored nine runs in the top of the second inning.

The Pacers began their comeback immediately, scoring four runs in the bottom of the second to close the gap to 9-5.

The two teams traded four-run innings in the third and South Ripley added a run in the fourth to push ahead 14-9. Switzerland then made a final push in the fifth to nearly pull even after scoring three runs.

However, the rally ended when the Pacers had a runner thrown out at the plate and Switzerland managed only one baserunner over the final two innings to be tagged with the two-run loss.

Damion Courter was 3-for-4 with two doubles and three runs scored for the Pacers while Cade Rider was 3-for-4 with one double and five RBIs. Nate Scudder had a hit and two RBIs, Damian Breeck had a hit and scored twice and Zack Stout had a hit, a run and an RBI.

On Wednesday, the Pacers scored a run in the bottom of the seventh to avoid a shutout in a 9-1 loss to Class A No. 4 Rising Sun in Vevay.

The Shiners, who dropped their first Ohio River Valley Conference loss of the season the day before to Southwestern, blew open a close game with seven runs in the top of the sixth inning to take a 9-0 lead.

Switzerland broke up the shutout in the seventh when Zach Weaver scored on Patrick Stow's RBI.

Weaver had two of the Pacers' three hits with Rider picking up the other. Drew Chatham took the loss on the mound after giving up three earned runs on five hits in five innings with three strikeouts and two walks.

Rising Sun's Steven Jimenez struck out 10 in seven innings to pick up the win.

Switzerland (2-16, 1-10 ORVC) hosts Oldenburg Academy today.

Cub netters fall to East

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison girls tennis picked up a win at No. 1 doubles but that's all the Cubs could get in a 4-1 loss to Columbus East Wednesday in the consolation semifinals of the Hoosier Hills Conference tournament.

Olivia Kelley and Renée Walker gutted out a hard-fought win over East's Louna Prince and Cristina Marco 3-6, 7-6 (5), 10-5 to avoid the shutout.

Host Columbus (10-6) won the other four matches in straight sets, dropping just 12 games along the way.

Kathryn Hodzen defeated Kourtney Neukam at No. 1 singles 6-1, 6-4; Megan Cheri beat Wiley Gross 6-0, 6-0 at No. 2 singles and Ayako Nomura defeated Emma Lostutter 6-2, 6-1 at No. 3 singles. Catherine Millwood and Emie Kiser then defeated Madison's Grace Brautigam and Ana Reiff 6-3, 6-1 at No. 2 doubles.

Madison will travel to Bedford North Lawrence for the seventh-place match on Friday.

•Wilkerson

opened a week later, he was hesitant. But it didn't take long before his co-workers at VSG began urging him to apply and he warmed to the idea.

"I work with a lot of parents who have kids who play sports for Madison and when the job opened up, everybody was pushing for me to apply so I did," said Wilkerson. "This time it ended up working out in my favor."

As a player and later assistant coach at Jeffersonville, Wilkerson has had a chance to see Madison up close for the past 30 years. While some see Madison as merely the smallest school in a power conference, Wilkerson sees a program that was once among the state's best and has a chance to return to that level.

"There is a really rich tradition from a basketball standpoint and from an athletic standpoint. Growing up in Jeffersonville and coming to Madison to play Jason Perry and Travis Inskeep, those guys were really, really good," Wilkerson said. "They're in a really good conference. We get to play New Albany and Floyd Central and Bedford and Jeffersonville so it's really attractive not only from that aspect, but from the talent and the commitment from the kids they have coming through. That makes a coach's job really, really easy."

And about that conference? Rather than seeing the Hoosier Hills Conference as a weight around Madison's neck, Wilkerson sees it as a group of schools that can make each other better.

"It's a little bit different at the high school level. If this was at the college level, the conference would be extremely important because that dictates what you do in the tournament," Wilkerson said. "Fortunately, at the high school level, conference is important but it's not as important as the sectional, regional, semistate and state. It puts us in a really good position to prepare ourselves for the tournament facing such good competition. I'm really looking forward to it.

"I know there is a lot of talk about changing conferences and obviously I would support any direction that they wanted to take, but for me, I say stay," Wilkerson added. "Let's see where we are and what we need to do to prepare for the tournament."

Wilkerson replaces Mark McFarland, who was 21-27 in two seasons with the Cubs, including 12-12 last year. According to Madison principal Michael Gasaway, the school received 19 applicants for the job. A committee narrowed that list to five last week and three on Tuesday. Wilkerson was offered the job Wednesday morning.

"We are excited to welcome coach Wilkerson to the Madison family. He not only brings 20 years of coaching experience and a wealth of basketball knowledge, but also brings extensive personal experience as a premier player at the high school, college and professional/international levels," Madison athletic director Joe Bronkella said in a statement. "Wilkerson brings a very unique skill set to our program. His experience and coaching philosophy are both elements which can take our program to the next level. Above that, his personal commitment to the academic and athletic success in the short term and focus on the importance of post-secondary opportunities for our student athletes was a huge piece of the interest in this hire."

Wilkerson lives in Louisville with his wife, Carissa, and daughter, Brooke, but he said there are plans to move closer to Madison — especially considering how this week started.

"It's hard because I'm a city boy at heart," Wilkerson said with a laugh. "But I don't want to go through that with a deer again."

Mustangs deny Shawe's quest for 1st win

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Sports Editor
mcampbell@madisoncourier.com

NEW WASHINGTON — A night after enduring a 16-0 pounding by Madison, New Washington softball delivered the beating Wednesday in a 10-0 win over Shawe Memorial in six innings.

The Hilltoppers, winless in 14 games, made the trip to 3-5 New Washington with hopes of picking up the team's first win of the season.

Shawe held the Mustangs in check for the first three innings, using a double play to get out of a jam in the first and a pair of strikeouts by pitcher Kristen Snodgrass to strand a New Washington runner on third in the third.

Meanwhile, Shawe loaded the bases in the top of the fourth but stranded all three runners. That must have been a wakeup call for the Mustangs because New Washington got busy in the bottom of the inning to score four runs and break the game open.

"We got good pitching but we didn't put the ball in play and when you don't score any runs you don't put any pressure on the defense and we didn't do that," Shawe coach Tim Torrance said. "This is a pitcher who threw a lot of strikes and we hit better typically but for whatever reason we just didn't hit the ball today … when we don't hit that puts a lot of pressure on our defense and our defense struggles at times and that's what happened tonight. We held them in check for about three innings and we were still in it going into the sixth but we just could make the plays when we needed to."

While the Mustangs played flawless defense behind starter Megan Snelling all game, Shawe ended up booting the ball seven times overall while being out-hit 8-2 by New Washington. The four-run rally in the fourth needed only a single by Madison Helton and a double by Yasmine Webster because Shawe assisted with three errors.

New Washington tacked on two more runs in the fifth by alternating hits and strikeouts against Snodgrass. A leadoff triple to the left field fence by Izzy Balderas got the rally going and a one-out RBI single by Adrian Miles made it 5-0. Snodgrass then fanned her second Mustang of the inning while Miles was advancing to third on a passed ball and a stolen base. Miles then made it 6-0 on an RBI single to left field by Eryn Helton.

Shawe went down in order in both the fifth and sixth and New Washington put an end to it in the bottom of the sixth by scoring four more runs to invoke the mercy rule. Back-to-back singles by Summer Raines and Webster opened the inning and an error on a ball hit by Grace Ellison to third made it 7-0.

Snodgrass got the first out on a ground ball to third and then struck out Pammy Minton for the second but a passed ball and an error pushed two runs across before an RBI double to center field by Madison Helton closed out the 10-0 win.

Shawe's two hits included a two-out single to right field by Snodgrass in the third — she was immediately cut down trying to steal second — and a squirrelly little infield single on a pop up in front of home plate by Grace McAllister that the pitcher, catcher and third baseman all tried to field but none could get a handle on.

The Hilltoppers went home still seeking their first win of the season but with the understanding that they are far closer to being able to do that than just a few weeks ago when the season started.

"We had a couple of comments when we got done that if we played them again we think we can compete with them and that's what I want to see," Torrance said. "We've come a long way from game one of the season to today."

While Torrance said he would have liked to have been closer than that the final margin, it was still a game where the Hilltoppers can build some confidence.

"They have improved by leaps and bounds and I'm seeing it every day and those who are around the program are seeing it every day … we've come a whole long way from where we started," Torrance said.

Shawe (0-14) was to host 1A No. 3 Rising Sun Friday.

Cline picked up the win in the circle for Milan after scattering four runs — two earned — on five hits with seven strikeouts and two walks.

On Wednesday, Southwestern managed just three hits but made the most of them to beat Eastern (Pekin) 5-1 in Hanover.

The Rebels did all of their scoring in the first three innings. Mahoney opened the first with a double and scored on Ralston's single. Ralston then came in on a fielder's choice for a 2-0 lead.

Southwestern then pushed three runs across in the third after Ralston walked, stole second and scored on an error, Bruce reached on an error and scored on an error and Cadence Humes drew a walk and scored on a passed ball.

That's all the offense pitcher Lakyn Wilson needed. The senior allowed just one unearned run in the sixth inning and only three hits over seven innings with six strikeouts and four walks.

"We had a lot of positives tonight defensively. We had a rare triple play the first inning and played solid defense the rest of the game," coach Ralston said. "Lakyn did a good job keeping them off balance on the mound and Morgan had a great game defensively and at the plate. We just need to keep making progress these last couple weeks as we approach sectionals."

Mahoney had two of Southwestern's three hits with Ralston collecting the other. Bruce was 0-for-3 but scored a run and had an RBI.

Southwestern (7-8, 2-5 ORVC) was to play another potential sectional foe in South Ripley on Friday in Versailles.

Mefford's 33, Kramer's 36 lead Rebel golfers to win

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hunter Mefford shot a two-under 33 and Austin Kramer carded a one-over 36 to lead Southwestern boys golf to a close win in a quad meet Thursday at Butler Falls Golf Course in Hanover.

The Rebels shot 160 as a team — just two strokes better than Austin — while New Washington was a distant third at 209 and Shawe did not field a complete team.

Trenton Hadley had a 42 and Camden Ashby had a 49 to complete Southwestern's scoring. Lake Lambert had a 54 and Steven Stillwell a 56 in non-scoring rounds.

"It was nice to get a win at home tonight. Austin is improving every time we see them so we did well to squeak out a win against them," Southwestern coach David Bright said. "It's good to see Hunter and AK playing so well. Trenton is very close to dropping into the 30s and when he does we are going to start going pretty low as a team. Lake has improved so much since he started the season and stepped in nicely lately. We are starting to peak at the right time with conference next weekend and sectionals right around the corner. I'm excited to see what we can do in the coming weeks."

Southwestern returns to action Monday when it plays Oldenburg Academy at Hillcrest Country Club in Batesville.

Drive raised $2,275

Knights of Columbus #934 in Madison had its 42nd Tootsie Roll Drive last weekend, which raised $2,275 that will be donated to special-needs classes in Jefferson and Switzerland counties.

At the drive, volunteers from schools around Jefferson and Switzerland counties were positioned at Kroger and volunteers from the Knights of Columbus #934 were positioned at Walmart to pass out Tootsie Rolls and to ask for donations. Volunteers also collected donations at Prince of Peace after Mass collections in Madison and Vevay.

All donations will be distributed to around 15 special-needs classes throughout Jefferson and Switzerland counties. These donations will help classes pay for school supplies, field trips and other educational items.

Shawe team at state

Shawe Memorial's English Academic Team competed at the State Finals at Purdue University on May 4. This year's subject was the Fertile Crescent. Shawe placed 4th in state in its class. The English team included Captain Kelly Hesse, Abigail Hill, Johanna Leatherman, Walter Stanley, Phoebe Grote, Grayson May and Anne Stockman. The team is coached by Andie Martin.

Regatta Parade form available; fireworks plans announced

Courier staff report

Forms are available for this year's 4th of July and Madison Regatta Parade. The parade will begin at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 5. The route will take floats down Main Street from Jefferson to Cragmont.

This year's parade, sponsored by German American Bank, will showcase the theme "Go for Gold" in honor of the City of Madison hosting the Gold Cup race at this year's Regatta, said a news release. The cost for parade entries is $75 to be made payable to the City of Madison with "Regatta Parade" written in the memo section.

The fee will be waived for nonprofit agencies and schools. The parade's proceeds will help cover the costs of the annual American Legion Post #9 Fireworks Spectacular set for dusk on Saturday, July 6 along Madison's riverfront.

The fireworks display will be free for spectators, but a wristband must be purchased to enter the areas that are part of the Roostertail Music Festival, including Bicenntenial Park, Vaughn Drive from West Street to Broadway and West Street south of First Street. Wristbands are $25 for music only, $25 for racing only or $40 for both for the entire weekend.

Donation boxes made by Madison Consolidated High School's Cub Manufacturing students will be along Madison's riverfront the night of the fireworks to help raise funds for future fireworks displays.

Forms are available online at www.madison-in.gov or at City Hall. The deadline for parade entries and fees is June 28 and should be mailed to Kim Washer at 1958 N. Ryker's Ridge Road, Madison, IN 47250 or emailed to kimberly.washer@meritor.com

If you have any questions or concerns about the parade, contact Washer by phone at (812) 599-6635 or by email at Kimberly.washer@meritor.com

Parade and fireworks sponsorship opportunities are still available. For information, contact Andrew Forrester at 812-265-8300 or email community@madison-in.gov

Madisonian accepted into Order at Trine University

Courier staff report

Alex Risk of Madison, who majored in mechanical engineering, is one of 49 seniors in Trine University's Allen School of Engineering & Technology who were inducted into the Order of the Engineer during a ceremony May 1.

Risk participated in the ceremony, which was a ring ceremony that was a public induction of all candidates into the Order of the Engineer. This order is a fellowship of engineers who are trained in science and technology and are dedicated to the practice, teaching or administration of their profession.

During the ceremony, engineering students are invited to accept the Obligation of the Engineer and a stainless steel ring is placed on the smallest finger of the working hand. The obligation is a formal statement of an engineer's responsibilities to the public and to the profession. Trine University conducted its first ring ceremony in November 1978.

Trine University is an internationally recognized, private, co-educational, residential institution in Angola, Indiana, that offers associate's, bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in the Allen School of Engineering & Technology, Ketner School of Business, College of Graduate and Professional Studies, Franks School of Education, Jannen School of Arts & Sciences, Rinker-Ross School of Health Sciences and the School of Computing.

Philharmonic orchestra presents Memorial Day performance

Music Director Dr. David Bowden and the award-winning Columbus, Indiana, Philharmonic Orchestra present the 19th Annual "Salute!" concert in honor of those who have served and currently serve in the U.S. Armed Forces. The outdoor concert will take place on the lawn of the Bartholomew County Courthouse on Friday, May 24, at 7 p.m.

This free patriotic concert began in 2001 and continues to be a community favorite each year during Memorial Day Weekend. The Columbus, Indiana, Philharmonic performance features uplifting musical works, powerful vocals and dramatic readings that honor the military service of those in uniform, their families at home and those who made the ultimate sacrifice.

This event has become one of Columbus' highly anticipated programs and is tradition for families as they bring lawn chairs, blankets and their patriotic attire. Along with the concert, there will be a Blackhawk helicopter landing at 6 p.m. and concessions, with proceeds benefitingthe Columbus East High School Band Boosters.

Also included in the program is a special flag-folding ceremony honoring those who sacrificed their lives to protect the country.

This year's program includes guest vocalist Abigail Marie Beerwart, who was born and raised in Columbus. She was a May 2019 graduate of Wheaton College in Illinois with a BMus in Vocal Performance. She has previously sung in "The Magic Flute," "Die Fledermaus" and "L'Orefo" and has won numerous first place vocal competition awards.

Alex Farrar, 2019 Betty F. Brown Award for Instrumental Excellence first-place winner, will join the orchestra for Carmichael's "Stardust." Farrar is a 2019 graduate of Columbus North High School and has been playing the saxophone for seven years, studying privately for the last four. During high school, Farrar has been a member of numerous performing groups including marching and pep bands, pit orchestras, musical choruses and vocal jazz ensembles. He will be attending the IU Jacobs School of Music this fall pursuing a degree in saxophone performance.

Sunshine Homemakers

The Sunshine Homemmakers met at the home of Dorothy Morgan on May 6 at 2 p.m. Morgan led the meeting with the Homemakers Creed and the Pledge of Allegiance.

Roll call was then taken by asking "What is your your fondest memory of your mother and how did it influence you?"

The thought of the month was "Her children arise and call her blessed, her husband also and he praises her" from Proverbs 31:28. The song for this meeting was "Bicycle Built for Two."

Marie Black gave the secretary's report and Morgan gave the treasurer's report. They then discussed Achievement Day that was held on May 10. Louise Anthony gave devotions from "Mornings With Jesus Luke 4-18."

The next meeting is at Morgan's house on June 12 at 2 p.m.

Jefferson County Extension Homemakers

The Jefferson County Extension Homemakers Council met May 1 at the Lonnie Mason Agriculture Extension Office at the 4-H Fairgrounds. President Carl Bell led the meeting with the Pledge of Allegiance, Secretary Dorothy Canada gave the secretary's report and the treasurer's report was given by Bell.

Frannie Phillips was presented for vice-president and was accepted. The group then discussed the recent quilt show and how there are scholarships for three Jefferson County seniors. Achievement Day plans were made, which was held in the 4-H Fairgrounds Community Building on May 10.

The next meeting will be June 6 at 9:15 a.m.

Smyrna Homemakers

Smyrna Homemakers met April 17 at 1 p.m. at Resurrection Lutheran Church. Margie Renochler read devotions and refreshments were served. The Pledge of Allegiance was led by President Kay Dunham. All answered roll call by telling what flowers they are going to plant this spring.

Then, a secretary's report was read. The Bits and Pieces Quilt Show was reported on. Carol Lee of Madison won the quilt raffle.

Scholarships from the quilt show were discussed and plans were made for Achievement Day that was held on May 10 at the 4-H Fairgrounds.

The next regular meeting will be at Resurrection Lutheran Church at 1 p.m. on May 15.

It's never too late to thrive in life

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I am an older gay man. The bullying started when I was young. The boys in the neighborhood didn't want me around because I was lousy at sports. The girls didn't want any boys around while they were playing. When I started school, it wasn't any different. Bullying increased with junior high, and high school was the worst.

To cope, I avoided socializing with people. I didn't attend any high school functions. Consequently, I never really learned how to be around people. Later, I would usually say or do something that was frowned upon. That just made me isolate myself more. I started drinking as a coping mechanism, but of course, that was no help. My lowered inhibitions made me do stupid things, which again would alienate people, so I avoided outside contacts even more. I would drink alone, which led to legal problems. Eventually, I lost the privilege to drive. Living in a city with no public transportation means I am isolated again. That isolation also meant that I put on a lot of weight. After seeing how I looked, I lost even more confidence. The only good thing is that I've started to lose some of the excess weight because I have to walk everywhere I go. I'm still obese, but it's not as bad as it once was.

I watched my siblings as they dated, fell in love and married. The kids and grandkids followed. I watched the kids come in and happily relay the news of their days to their parents, whether it was hitting a home run in the game or some kid getting sick at school. Though my siblings would instruct them to tell me what had happened, too, by the time they got around to it, the enthusiasm was gone. They were just relaying information rather than sharing their lives.

When holidays came, I saw the excitement on everyone's faces, especially as the parents discussed how best to surprise the kids. The school plays and the games and all the other activities were fun to go to when I was asked. But the kids just looked at me as the uncle. I wasn't someone they thought about including.

I wish I had lived a different life. I think I could have loved someone. I never had the chance to meet and share anything with anyone. At times, I considered suicide but rejected that idea right away. I didn't want to put the family through that. I sometimes hope for a fatal disease — something natural that would end my life. So, now I just wait. I've accepted the fact that I will never get the chance to love someone or find someone to love me. Sorry this is so long. I actually feel better now. — Just Existing

Dear Just Existing: Today is a new beginning. You took the time to write to me, and you've acknowledged that by expressing your feelings and experiences you "actually feel better." I have great hope for you. It is time for you to find a wise and compassionate therapist with your best interests at heart. You sound like a very special person who has been living with unnecessary pain for way too long.

I am sorry that you endured bullying in school. That can be traumatic, especially at such a young age. And it is all too common to turn to alcohol, which has become its own problem. Check out Alcoholics Anonymous. Their 12-step program and group support are frequently lifesaving. It can be comforting to know that others have suffered similar slights as you have.

Once you find the right therapist, and stop drinking alone, there is a good chance that someone will fall in love with you — starting with yourself.

It is never too late to begin living your life rather than just existing.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! WHAT'S THIS I HEAR ABOUT YOU THROWING LINUS OUT OF THE HOUSE?
THAT'S NOT LEGAL, YOU KNOW.. HE'S PART OF YOUR FAMILY... LEGALLY, YOU CAN'T THROW HIM OUT..
OH, YES, I CAN, AND I DID! LEGALLY, A BIG SISTER CAN THROW OUT A YOUNGER BROTHER BECAUSE SHE'S BIGGER THAN HE IS, AND HE BUGS HER ALL THE TIME, AND SHE CAN DO IT, AND I DID IT!!!
AND IF YOU'RE SMART, YOU WON'T GET INVOLVED!
I'M VERY SMART

WHAT'S WRONG? YOU GUYS ARE AFRAID OF A SCARY VOICE AND A DARK DOORWAY? I'LL HANDLE THIS.
IT'S JUST SOME RACCOONS!
THE RACCOONS ARE WEARING LAB COATS AND ONE HAS GLASSES. ALSO THEY'RE BUILDING SOMETHING. THAT'S TOTALLY NORMAL AND NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT, RIGHT?

THAT WAS A LOT OF FUN.
YEAH, IT WAS.
OF COURSE, IT'S EVEN BETTER THAT YOUR MOM PICKED US UP INSTEAD OF YOUR BROTHER.
I THINK SHE REALIZED MY COUNTLESS TEXTS OF "PLEASE, PLEASE COME INSTEAD" IN ALL CAPS WERE COMPLETELY SINCERE.
I KNOW IT'S A LITTLE LATE IN THE GAME, TED, BUT WE SHOULD DISCUSS OUR FAMILY VACATION PLANS FOR THE SUMMER.

OUR VACATION SAVINGS WENT DRY THE MOMENT WE HAD TO REPAIR THE PATIO AND BACK OF THE HOUSE.
BUT CAN'T WE TAKE EVEN A SMALL TRIP?
WHO NEEDS TO?! WE'LL HAVE PARTIES ON OUR NEW PATIO! WE'LL RELAX ON OUR NEW PATIO! WE'LL, UH, DANCE ON OUR NEW PATIO!
SO THAT'S OUR SUMMER- JUST THE TWO OF US DANCING NONSTOP ON OUR PATIO AS HIL RUNS OFF TO FAYE'S HOUSE AGAIN IN SHAME?

BRIDGE

A PEEK ISN'T ALWAYS WORTH TWO FINESSES

Henry Bromel, in a "Northern Exposure" script, wrote, "They say dreams are the windows of the soul -- take a peek and you can see the inner workings, the nuts and bolts."

At the bridge table, they say that one peek is worth two finesses. Sometimes, though, a "peek" that tells you that a finesse is working might be misleading.

With that hint, how should South play in six spades? West leads the heart king. South wins with his ace and cashes the spade ace, West shocking declarer by discarding a club.

North's raise to three spades promised some values. After two control-bids, South realized that Blackwood would not uncover the minor-suit queens, so he jumped to six spades.

Suppose South, using that trump peek, crosses to the board with a diamond and plays a spade to his jack, taking the finesse. What happens after that?

The answer is that declarer goes down, losing one spade and one club. (That line works only if West is long in both hearts and clubs, which is so unlikely.)

South has six side-suit tricks:

North 05-11-19
♠ 5 4 2
♥ 8 6 4 3
♦ A Q 10
♣ 6 5 3

West
♥ K Q J 10
♦ J 7 4 2
♣ J 9 8 7 4

East
♠ Q 10 9 8
♥ 9 7 5 2
♦ 9 6 3
♣ Q 10

South
♠ A K J 7 6 3
♥ A
♦ K 8 5
♣ A K 2

Dealer: South
Vulnerable: Both

South	West	North	East
2♣	Pass	2♦	Pass
2♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♣	Pass	4♦	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ♥ K

one heart, three diamonds and two clubs. So, he needs six trump tricks, which must include three ruffs. But to get those ruffs, he needs three dummy entries. He plays a diamond to dummy's 10! When that finesse wins, declarer ruffs a heart, crosses two more times in diamonds to ruff hearts, cashes his top clubs and exits with his last club.

It is trick 12, and South has the spade king-jack hovering over East's queen-10. Brilliant!
